

Indoor Surveillance System using Stereo Vision

Silas Waltzer and Eric Tang

The accurate tracking of people is an ongoing problem in computer vision. It has applications in security, as well as business, manufacturing, and entertainment. Rather than monitoring people with a simple video feed, a computer vision system can track activity automatically and provide useful data. This stereo vision system allows a computer to locate multiple people simultaneously in 3-D space and track their movements.